ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Lincoln was a complex man. He had the brain of a sage, the foresight of a prophet, the inflexible purpose of the historic reformers and a tender heart. This man with the gentle soul had the strength and will to preserve the country through Civil War. When action was called for, Lincoln took decisive action. When his Generals hesitated, he replaced them, not only once but again and again, until he found men who could lead and win. The job was to preserve his nation for the future, intact and strong. Today the nation and its proven principles are the hope of freedom loving people throughout the world. Today the power of the nation is second to none and we vacillate. The free enterprise system has proven itself, not only in this country but abroad. West Germany recovered from ruin to become the most prosperous nation in Europe using this system. The people of the world hunger for freedom, yet we wonder what our national purpose is. Captive people risk their lives to cross the iron curtain to freedom. Yet, we refuse to hold out hope to people in slave nations that they will some day live free. We should be out selling the world on free enterprise, justice and individual freedom. Yet, all we do is be anti-communist in a quiet way so as not to offend the Communists. At the same time, we weaken our system at home with controls and socialistic legislation. Lincoln proved that he deserved to inherit the nation from Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and all the others who pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. We have yet to prove it. Common sense never becomes dated. There are many wonderful Lincoln stories. Most of them have an application in

"Lincoln's Dog Story"

In defending a man charged with assault and battery, Lincoln won the case by telling a dog story, after the testimony had clearly proved that the plaintiff, although getting the worst of it in the end, had started the fight.

"But your client could have protected himself without half-killing mine," retorted the lawyer who was opposing Lincoln.

"That reminds me of a story," said Lincoln. "A man who was attacked by a farmer's vicious dog killed the brute with a pitchfork.

"'Why did you kill my dog? Why didn't you defend yourself with the other end of the pitchfork?' demanded the angry farmer.

"'Well, why didn't the dog come at me with his other end?'"

OPEN HOUSE

After the service there will be an Open House Hour and the opportunity to see what is on loan to the Historical Society for the winter from Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin. In the entry on one side of the door are scenes of Old Boston and a "Prospective View of Boston Common". On the other side are various quaint colored prints. Toward the front on one side are two old French chairs and a Delft bird cage; on the other side are two Dutch fireplace figures, a woman and a child. On the stairway is a print of Washington's coach and, by way of contrast, one of the first railroad trains. Upstairs is a set of six chairs and a rocker that belonged to Herman Melville and a quaint small chair upholstered in red velvet used by Mrs. Hamlin as a child.
